Mark Haley - President

As the President of Smart City Networks, L.P., Mark Haley leads the company's strategic and operational development as well as the efforts of all corporate administration. Mr. Haley guides the company in the critical areas of data network design and deliverance to our clients. Mr. Haley has over twenty years of experience with the tradeshow and corporate events in North America. Before joining Smart City, Haley was the vice president of facilities for the Las Vegas Convention & Visitors Authority. During his time with the LVCVA, Haley had a significant impact on the organization, launching the customer experience department before transitioning to his executive role overseeing the facilities department. Prior to the LVCVA, Haley was with Aramark for 23 years during which he held a variety of operating positions in Aramark's Sports and Entertainment Division, culminating with his role as executive vice president of Aramark's Convention & Cultural Attractions Group. Haley is involved with the local Academy of Hospitality and Tourism, along with the Las Vegas Chamber of Commerce, International Association of Assembly Managers (IAAM), and International Association of Exhibition and Events (IAEE). He holds a BS degree in accounting from University of Scranton in Pennsylvania.
